

Now is a splendid time to have those pictures taken.

Before the holiday rush begins we can take plenty of time to get acquainted and bring out your best points.

Also—we have some interesting things in new style mountings.

FIRST FIELD ARTILLERY

each of the three batteries that went into action, and the percentage of hits made. As the white puffs of bursting shrapnel hung over the targets in just the position for the bursting shell to do the maximum of damage to men, horses, and guns, the comments from the official party were highly complimentary. Major W. M. Cruikshank, commanding the Field Artillery here, came in for much favorable comment on the effectiveness of his organization, which supplemented the work done with blank ammunition during the maneuvers just over, by showing what it could do with service ammunition.

There was only one accident to mar the morning, and that was the spectacular fall of Sergeant Coke, of the mounted escort to the department commander. Coke's mount slipped on a loose stone and fell heavily, rolling completely over its rider, and pinning him to the ground, badly shaken and bruised, and with a broken collar bone. A hurry call was sent out for the hospital corps, and Coke was taken to the post hospital in an ambulance in record time.

The field artillery was up against a hard proposition this morning, as it fired at unknown targets and unknown range, each battery commander being given a problem which he was supposed to solve in the shortest possible time. The general direction of the targets was known, but that was all, and it devolved upon the officer to locate them, determine the range, get his battery into a protected position, open fire, and "bracket" the target. The average time taken by the three batteries to move into position and open fire was a fraction over 9 minutes, and once in action it took about 10 minutes to fire about 40 shots from each battery.

Lieutenant Rehkopf, Captain Deems and Captain Hopkins took their batteries into action in the order named.

After the firing General Macomb, Major McManus and several other officers who were observing the results, inspected the grounds and found that the shrapnel had done deadly execution. Not a man would have been left alive if the batteries had been firing at animate, instead of canvas targets.

Some people in this wide world live on a very narrow margin.

ARMY HAS PROBLEM REGARDING QUARTERMASTER AT SCHOFIELD

On November 1, Schofield Barracks will either be without a post quartermaster—which is impracticable—or else one of the officers of the recently organized quartermaster corps now stationed here will have to take station at Leilehua—which is inconvenient. In the absence of orders from the War Department assigning a regularly detailed quartermaster to the post, the Department of Hawaii will probably have to take the initiative, or the army bill is plain on the point that no regimental quartermaster can act for other organizations than his own, and under this ruling Captain Watkins, the present post quartermaster, becomes ineligible for office on that date.

It might be possible to relieve Captain Watkins as regimental quartermaster and continue him as post quartermaster, but at best this arrangement could be only temporary.

The idea of the military legislators is evidently to keep regimental quartermasters and commissaries free to immediately take the field with their own organizations, and to do this they must be kept clear of the accumulated business of a big post. An example of this very thing occurred in the recent maneuvers, when Captain Watkins was unable to accompany the Second Infantry into the field, being left behind in command of the post and with a vast amount of property besides that belonging to his own regiment in his charge.

Of the five officers of the new quartermaster corps now stationed in this department, the choice to take permanent station at Schofield Barracks down to two, Capt. D. B. Case, and Captain E. H. Cooke. The latter is soon to be sent back to the line of the army, so this leaves Captain Case, a permanent member of the corps, the probable selection, unless the War Department orders an additional quartermaster here.

Case Will Be Busy.

Captain E. H. Cooke is another officer who has a knotty problem to solve in connection with the consolidation of the three departments. As an officer of the department, all his funds are subject to his cheques as "E. H. Cooke, Paymaster, U. S. Army." On November 1 he will no longer be a paymaster, and will not be able to sign his own cheques. Of course there are ways of getting round this obstacle, but it instances some of the puzzles that are constantly coming up over consolidation.

Until the present consolidation of the staff corps Captain Case has been an officer of the subsistence department, and has been acting as depot commissary at Honolulu with title of assistant to the chief commissary of the Western Division. He is now an officer of the Department of Hawaii, under the chief quartermaster and can act as commissary, or quartermaster, or paymaster, or all three. If he takes station at Schofield Barracks he will probably have to fill all three positions, and his work will be no sinecure.

The policy of the War Department during the last few months has been to send regular quartermasters to army posts, so that when the new law goes into effect on the first of next month the post commissaries and quartermasters could return to their own organizations. However, Schofield Barracks, the largest post in the army, has been overlooked, and to comply with the law the Department of Hawaii will have to order one of the quartermasters on duty here to that station. If subsequent orders sending another officer to the post are received, no harm will have been done but now the supposition is that with five of the quartermaster corps attached to the department, the War Department considers Hawaii amply supplied, and will expect the work to be split up between them.

Major Cheatham, as chief quartermaster, unquestionably belongs with department headquarters; Captain Edwards is needed on the construction work, and besides, his four-year detail to the Q. M. will be up in a few months; Captain Game will also be relieved soon, and he is needed to run the depot here, and to attend to transportation problems; Captain Cooke goes back to the line in a short while. This puts the office of post quartermaster, commissary and paymaster at Schofield up to Captain Case, by process of elimination and any day now he may receive orders from General Macomb to proceed to his new station. Capt. Case's Promotion.

Incidentally, word has been received here through unofficial channels that Captain Case's promotion to the grade of major will date from August 24th, pending the result of the examinations which he took a short time ago. Capt. Frederick H. Pomroy, subsistence department, who stood just ahead of Captain Case on the list, failed physically in his examination for promotion.

The paragraph of the bill which makes it impossible for other than regularly detailed or permanent members of the quartermaster corps to serve outside their own organizations, reads as follows:

"Provided further, that wherever the Secretary of War shall decide that it is necessary and practicable, regimental, battalion, and squadron quartermasters and commissaries shall be required to perform any duties that junior officers in the Quartermaster Corps may properly be required to perform, but such regimental, battalion and squadron quartermasters and commissaries shall not be required to receipt for any money or property which does not pertain to their respective regiments, battalions or squadrons, and they shall not be separated from the organization to which they belong."

HALLOWE'EN TO BE OBSERVED

The spacious gymnasium at Palama Settlement will be the scene of hilarious entertainment tomorrow night when Halloween will be celebrated in fitting style.

The workers of the settlement, together with several outside helpers have arranged a big indoor street carnival that would make Barnum and Bailey's aggregation green with envy. It will be no miniature affair, but a real life-sized collection of side-shows, candy and lemon booths and various other attractions, including spiels, so dear to the heart of the youngster. The entire hall will be given over to the entertainment and there will be pie-eating contests, bobbing for apples, a free "shoot the schutes," a fish pond, and other features too numerous to mention.

There will be no admission fee, but tickets to the sideshows and candy booths, etc., will be on sale on the inside at the rate of ten for five cents, and from one to two tickets will be charged for the different attractions. All residents of the Palama district are invited to attend, as well as others, and it is expected that there will be at least a thousand present.

At the Homestead tomorrow night the members of the Y. W. C. A. will give a Halloween party, and from the cellar to the attic of the house, ghosts and goblins will abound in profusion. It will be a masked affair, and the usual games that go to make a party of this kind enjoyable will prevail.

The Chinese students of the Beretania Mission will have a little doings at the school on Beretania street between Smith and Maunakea.

Aided and encouraged by the federal government the first co-operative farmers' and dairymen's organization in the Territory is now in prosperous and highly prominent development in upper Oahu, island of Hawaii. This fact was brought out last Thursday, at the meeting of the Butter Makers' association at Glenwood, which was attended by the largest gathering of actual settlers since the days of the old coffee boom.

The farmer is now informed that the safety of the country depends on his vote.

KUHIO ON STUMP

the employment of citizens labor on government work, he asked what was the use of introducing such a bill when there was a law when the Federal government work, he asked what was the use of introducing such a bill when there was a law already in the United States statutes to that effect. There was no law when the Federal government had a contract, but if the government was doing the work itself the law said it should be done by citizen labor.

They had stated that the delegate had never done anything for the Territory. He would give them one illustration of what he had done. When Taft was Secretary of War his hobby was the Philippine Islands. A bill was introduced appropriating $600,000 for fortifications in the Philippines and Hawaii. The delegate went before the committee to object to this tagging of Hawaii upon the Philippines. The first year he lost out but the next year he won, when $600,000 was appropriated for work in the Philippines and the same amount for fortifications in Hawaii. It was easy enough to say that it was bound to come anyway, but it was their delegate who had committed Congress to specific appropriations for Hawaii.

Representative Carney protested against committing Congress to Hawaii in the matter of Pearl Harbor naval station. He and the delegate were each allowed forty minutes before the committee. Other representatives eagerly asked for the privilege of taking part of the delegate's time, and he gave them his time to fight for Hawaii. "Notwithstanding the opposition," said the speaker, "I carried that project of making the Pearl Harbor naval station."

Kuhio then took up the Punchbowl lands question, saying in substance: "I am sorry to know that my Portuguese fellow citizens are down on me. We are the ones that gave them their homes up there. Three different times I offered to fight for them up to the supreme court, but they never came to me. The law is not being carried out, but I am not to blame for it. There is proof on the other islands that the homestead laws are good for the people. The people there are being charged only thirty dollars for their homes, while you are being made to pay six hundred dollars."

He said his fight against the governor was not for himself but for the benefit of the people of this territory. "When I see we are drifting away from the cause of American citizenship, it is time for me to kick." With an allusion to the Japanese scare on the mainland, he asked, "Where can we show that we have advanced since annexation, from the American point of view? Last census showed that in fifteen years from now one-half of the citizens of Hawaii would be Japanese. We must bring in people who can assimilate with Americans."

In conclusion, Kuhio paid some attention to the boasts of the Democrats of what they were going to do if given power.

REPUBLICAN MEETINGS TONIGHT. Republican meetings will be held tonight at Liliha and School Streets and at Molili. Delegate Kuhio will probably be the main speaker at one or both of the meetings.

POLITICAL NOTES

D. Kalaokalani, Sr.—I see the Republican candidates are not saying anything from the soapbox. Are they afraid to stand before the voters?

The canvas banner carrying pictures of Kuhio and Col. Sam Parker, which offended Kuhio's eyes yesterday when he arrived from Hawaii, was taken down last evening about dusk.

Rev. S. L. Desha, of Hilo, said this morning that it would have been best for the Republican leaders to have sent some of the political orators after the trail of Link McCandless and Kanio.

W. C. Achi—If the Democratic party really stands for the common people, and the Hawaiians, why did not the leaders select some Hawaiians to represent the electorate in the Fifth district, both in the senatorial and supervisory tickets?

J. K. Paele—The Koolan electorate will surely vote for Link McCandless for delegate to Congress, Mayor Fern and Sheriff Jarrett. There is no possible chance for the Republicans to get support from the voters in the district of Koolau.

POLITICAL MUSINGS

Hope springs eternal in the breast of Link.

Will sour grapes figure among Hawaii's fruits about a week from tomorrow?

It's a wise territorial Democratic constituency that knows its own campaign fund.

All of Hawaii's candidates are promising candidates, but the Democratic ones are doing the most of it.

Wonder if they will go so far as to stick their heads in the sand if Link does not disgorge the "long green"?

If the people of Hawaii are not favorably impressed with the policies of the Republican party it will certainly not be the party leaders' fault.

This city owes it to itself to elect a sheriff that will make some endeavor to prevent crime as well as run down the criminals after the crime has been committed.

Why can't someone sneak a dictatorship into Democratic headquarters about the time that forlorn gathering gets positive word from Link that he will not cough up a cent?

It is thought that the cause of the grouchy Link is carrying is the fact that he has to play second fiddle while Barron keeps up a continuous solo. There is danger of the foot and mouth disease.

Col. Sam is a-goin' some with the people for that mayoralty job. He is on nine points at every meeting now nights. There should be no back firing in his administration, nor anything else that would have a tendency to make a progressive city want to turn backwards.

J. C. COHEN'S POLITICAL CIRCUS IS POPULAR

J. C. Cohen's political circus, which took the road yesterday evening, has proved its title, and at Atkinson Park and the Magoon block, where meetings were conducted, audiences of nearly 1000 persons attended. The circus' entertainment feature, manager by Will Prestige, consists of Hen Wise and his wife, a number of Hawaiian singers and Little Aloie Prestige.

At both meetings following the entertainment, using the auto truck as speaking platform, the independent legislative candidate and several Home Rule candidates addressed the crowds. Cohen gave his attention to the labor question declaring the laboring men should have a real representative in the law-making body and that he was the qualified man for the job. William Ahia, independent candidate for supervisor, and Kalaokalani, Sr., were among the speakers. The political circus will be repeated tonight at Jack Lane, Nuuanu avenue, at 7 o'clock and at Liliha street, corner of Kukui, at 8:30.

OLDEST CANDIDATE ON REPUBLICAN TICKET BUS

S. K. MAHOE

S. K. Mahoe, nominated for the house from the Fifth district by the Republican party, is the oldest candidate on the ticket and probably the oldest on any of the tickets in Hawaii. He was born at Puna, Hawaii, on March 21, 1845, and has been a school teacher and a district magistrate and tax assessor during his long and active life. Today, even at his extreme age, he is an active and alert man and made a good record in the last house. He is now busy campaigning in the Fifth district and evidences are that he will be elected.

Dr. Wildbjorn Stefansson, the Arctic explorer, has shipped forty-one cases of relics and curios to be placed in the American Museum of Natural History in New York.
